If it is necessary to do anything more, another man is sent to get the last details without knowing what the first details are. If the men are not allowed to communicate with one another, how can the last man know what the first man know what the first man know what the first man has done? One detective may get only a description of a man; another may get his name, and the third the information that the man lives in a certain house. Of course, one of the men knows the man's name, but he does not always know why the man has been watched."

Mr. Whitney did not attempt to say that he had been misrepresented in the reports of interviews with nim, nor that the assertions that he made to the reporter were not founded on nots. His chief desire was to explain that the list of names that he has is not a black list.

Secretary Gildersheve said that Mr. Whitney had not reported to the society the names that he has, except in two cases. He was then asked why the following sentence had been used in the annual report signed by Dr. Crosby:

With a view of showing pitch magnified of this evil, an effort is now being unde to unmask the personality of the mish erequenters of these pieces and the names and descriptions which have already been callected from agic as important share in the archives of the sectory.

quite an important share in the archives of the society.

Secretary Gildersleeve said that the sentence originated with Mr. Whitney, and it had been taken from one of his reports and the orporated in the annual report. Perhaps better language might have been used, he added.

"Then it does not mean what it says?"

"The facts that it was intended to make known might have been better understood if they had been clothed in different language."

Mr. Gildersleeve thought the trouble had been caused by Mr. Whitney, who had been overgealous, and has allowed his tongue to run at random.

Chairman Mott was asked if the Executive Committee in deciding on the language of the card, intended to approve Mr. Whitney's use of some of the information that he has gained in his efforts to close disreputable piaces, by threatening to make puthic the names of frequenters of such piaces.

"Certainly not," he replied, "Mr. Whitney may have been over-walous, but it has never been life intention of the society to use such information in such a manner. Such a thing was never thought of ner authorized, We do not intend to be oppressive on any respectable man, Our sole intention is to suppress illegal places,"

Mr. Whitney was emphasic in saying resterday that nobody can fought the society, He referred to a despatch in vesterday's Sun which said that Assemblyman Hayes might infroduce a bill repealing the charter of the society, and said that the society has no charter. "The only way, then, that he society can be dissolved," he added. Is by repealing the act under which it is incorporated. If that is done, thousands of societies organized under the same act will be broken up.

ALBANY, Feb. d.—Assemblyman McCarthy was on the point of introducing a resolution this morning instructing the Judiciary Committee to ascertain whether the Seciety for the Prevention of Crime in New York have not exceeded the powers conferred upon it by its certificate of incorporation. He was prevented from doing so by a sudden adjournment. Mr. McCarthy, while in New York during the recess, will make a thorough examination of the published averments. He may be prepared on his return to introduce a more satisfactory resolution than the one he purposed offering this evening. He believes that if the charges prove true the Legislature should take action, and that the Committee be instructed to report such amendments to or such repeal of the act by which the society is incorporated as would make the features of its work recently exposed unlawful.
